The Medical and Dental Ministry

See One, Do One, Teach One...(again!)

*See one, do one, teach one...*it's the guiding principle of medical education. Whether it is med school, residency, or practice, this process is repeated over and over and over. Why? To make certain that healthcare professionals become competent and skilled in caring for the physical needs of their patients.

Long before this was established in medicine, Jesus did the same with his disciples. They saw him teach or encourage or heal. Then he sent them out to do the same. Later we see them training others.

We do the same in our work with healthcare students and professionals. We show them how to do spiritual care with their patients, we ask them to do the same, and we get them to teach that to a classmate or colleague.

During Christmas break, Cru hosts regional and national undergrad conferences to help students grow in their walks with God and develop a vision for reaching and growing the lost. There's time in the Word, training, worship and fellowship.

From New York to San Diego, we sent our whole person care preceptorship alums to nine conferences to host vision sessions for undergrad students who are considering a career in healthcare. It was standing room in several cities. For many undergrads, this was the first time they fully understood that healthcare is an incredible place to be the hands, feet, and voice of Jesus. They were thrilled to hear how they could sensitively, legitimately and ethically pray with their future patients and share the good news of Jesus with those patients and family members who are interested.

The end result? Hundreds of undergrad students now see that healthcare can be a rich mission field. Many of the alumni have used Jesus' methods in their own development and ministry. And prayerful, more will be sent to the harvest.

Thank you for joining with us in this adventure of see one, do one, teach one. Lives are different because of you.
