

November 2018

A Season of Thanks

November is among our favorite times of year. The weather has cooled. Ministry on campus is in full swing. Bob's alma mater, Mississippi State, will again face Ole Miss in the Egg Bowl, arguably the most intense rivalry game in the NCAA. There will be time with extended family. But most of all, it's a month for thanks.

Below are three special stories of thanks. As you read them, know that these are just as easily written to you. Your prayers, investments, and friendships help make these happen.

The following is written to a hospital adolescent psychiatry nurse who has been trained through mentoring with us and attendance at our conferences. It comes from a teenager who survived a suicide attempt. For confidentiality, specifics have been changed.

The best summer of my life was in 2014 at the METS whole person care preceptorship in California under the leadership of this incredible couple. That summer shaped my life and the way I practice medicine—I am forever grateful to God and to Bob and Diana Mason for that. What a joy to reunite with them and be part of the faculty for the Tulsa METS conference!

Finally, this November marks the 35th anniversary of Bob's reporting to his first Cru ministry assignment at Oklahoma State University. Praise to God for the incredibly ride and your faithful partnership with us. Some have been on board ever since 1983. Many others have been with us for decades. Regardless of your tenure, we are immensely thankful for you. Many God bless you as you recount his faithfulness in your own lives.
